TO REMEMBER AND RESCUE VALUES IN LIFE.

His name was Fleming, and he was a poor farmer in England. One day, while he was working in the field, he heard someone crying for help. The cry came from a nearby swamp.

He suddenly stopped working and ran towards the swamp. There, buried in mud up to his chest was a frightened little boy, shouting and trying to get out of the mud.

Fleming saved the boy, and the following day an expensive coach drove to the house of the farmer. A noble Englishman stepped out of the carriage and presented himself as the father of the boy Fleming had saved the day before, and said: "I would like to reward your deed... You saved the life of my son."

- "No. I cannot accept a reward for what I have done" answered the farmer, declining the offer.

At that very moment, a little boy stepped out of the house. "Is that boy your son?", asked the nobleman. -"Yes", proudly asserted the farmer.

- "Please, allow me to make a proposal to you. Let me take your boy with me to grant him a good education. If he is like his father, he will grow to become a man we all will be very proud of.". The farmer accepted.

Some time later the son of Fleming the farmer graduated as a medical doctor at the Saint Mary's Hospital School of Medicine in London. Later he became the renowned Sir Alexander Fleming, for his discovery of penicillin.

Many years later, the son of the nobleman –the boy who had been saved by the farmer in the swamp– fell ill with pneumonia. What saved him but penicillin?

The name of the nobleman is Randolph Churchill. The name of his son? Sir Winston Churchill.

Someone once said that we always get in return what we give.

A LITTLE STORY ABOUT JOB ASSIGNMENT

This is the story about four people named Everybody, Somebody, Anybody, and Nobody.

There was an important job to be done and Everybody was sure that Somebody would do it. Anybody could have done it, but Nobody did it.

Somebody got angry about that because it was Everybody's job. Everybody thought Anybody could do it, but Nobody realized that Everybody wouldn't do it.

It ended up that Everybody blamed Somebody when Nobody did what Anybody could have done!
